Overview

I have a great pleasure to introduce the youngest division in our Institute, namely the Division of Information Technology. The division was created in 2005, but this is the first time when it reports its activities.

The main purpose of creation was a better management of all IT activities in different departments, lowering IT costs and increase security over all computer systems used by the Institute.

Although we have started with small human resources, we have received a big support from other departments. Special thanks go to the Department of Detectors and Nuclear Electronics.

Our division handles many service-oriented activities. In daily work we answer many IT-related questions and deliver our help in order to solve hardware and software problems. The style of our work can be described as a result-oriented one.

Here is the list of our biggest achievements:

- construction of the server room;
- implementation of two electronic bank systems;
- development of the dynamic hardware and software inventory system;
- development of the Scientific Activity Database.
